THEME

According to the Assisted Reproductive Technology (Regulation) Bill and Rules - 2013,

“Surrogacy”, means an arrangement in which a woman agrees to a pregnancy, achieved through assisted reproductive technology, in which neither of the gametes belong to her or her husband, with the intention to carry it and hand over the child to the person or persons for whom she is acting as a surrogate;

Most medical studies point towards the concern for the surrogate’s psychological and emotional health, especially postpartum and during relinquishing the child, studies suggests that without counseling, surrogacy should be treated as a ‘high-risk psychological experience’.

The Indian Council for Medical Research has given Guidelines in the year 2005 regulating Assisted Reproductive Technology procedures. The Law Commission of India submitted the 228th report on Assisted Reproductive Technology procedures discussing the importance and need for surrogacy, and also the steps taken to control surrogacy arrangements.

The Supreme Court of Indian the 2008 Manji case held that commercial surrogacy was permissible in India. Baby Manji was commissioned by Japanese parents born to a gujrati women, but parents divorced before the birth of child. The genetic father wanted the child’s custody, but Indian law barred single men from it, and Japanese law didn’t recognise surrogacy. The baby was ultimately granted a visa, but the case underscored the need for a regulatory framework for surrogacy in India. This was the genesis of the Assisted Reproductive Techniques (Regulation) Bill.

Thus, the need of hour is to regulate the surrogacy laws, identifying rights and keeping in view the emotional and psychological aspects of surrogate mother.
